Troubleshooting E-Journals

a) There may be more than one entry, as is the case with Newsweek.

```
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>e-Journal Name</th>
<th>ISSN</th>
<th>Actions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Newsweek</td>
<td>0028-9604</td>
<td>i Find it</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Newsweek</td>
<td>0163-7053</td>
<td>i Find it</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
```

Click on the i for more information or ask Library staff for assistance in determining which entry you want.

b) There might be no entry.

The Library does not have an electronic version of Ann Arbor Observer. The most comprehensive list of the books, journals, etc. that the Library owns is the Mirlyn catalog.

c) The SFX links might not work. Click on the AskUs link at the top of the Search Tools page to report any problems.

</table>

b) Clicking on the title of an entry will bring up its full record with varying amounts of information. Some entries will show an abstract of the article. In this case, the full text of the article displays.

Title: Florida State U: Men still held to a beauty standard, say Florida State U. students.
Citation: The America's Intelligence Wire July 31, 2006, pNA
Year: 2006
Note: Text available
External: Electronic resource (HTML)
Text:
A new breed of man walks the campus. He's identified by Prada sunglasses, a slim-fit polo and spiked hair. His hesitation to play shirtless football on Landis Green is evident on his face if he didn't make it to the gym that morning. This emerging specimen is the modern man, and he has destroyed the traditional concepts of gender and beauty. Theorists such as Judith Butler and Simon de Beauvoir have already exposed gender as a social product rather than a biological essence. There is no physical evidence that supports social roles as being biological. Men are not born wanting blue balloons, He-Man action figures and a football; they are taught to want them. Masculinity, like the ABCs, is taught at a young age. It's an art reflective of the era in which we live.
