The International Population Census Collection

is divided into five African, four Asian, and four European Divisions; the Caribbean; North, South, and Central America; and three regions in Oceania

Covers three broad time periods: pre-1945, 1945-1967, and post-1967

Can be used in your research to:

- conduct comparative studies on social classes, the rural exodus, urbanization, and global diasporas
- study the changes and developments within a nation’s occupational, educational, and socio-economic structure
- study industrialization and social change in the United Kingdom, Germany, France, and other European countries
- study colonial societies and post-colonial nation-states
- study urbanization and immigration